A MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT STEPHEN JOEL TRACHTENBERG

Toward 21ST Century America: HIGHER EDUCATION AND SOCIETY

To arrive in Washington as the president of (and a professorial colleague in) a major university is an exciting experience. When the school happens to be The George Washington University, excitement increases because the institution's long and distinguished history has opened, and will continue to open, the doors of opportunity. More than a century and a half of growth and development, capped by the work of my widely and justly admired predecessor, Lloyd H. Elliott, has given our faculty and staff a solid basis for nationwide leadership in higher education.

Inevitably, the transition from the University of Hartford to The George Washington University has drawn me into an inner dialogue on the past, present, and future of our nation's colleges and universities. I offer here my perspective on challenges and opportunities that now confront us, and on the extent to which The George Washington University will be able to play a central role in the future shape of American higher education.

Recent History

From 1973 to 1980, most American universities struggled to maintain their functioning amid runaway inflation that eroded the ability to provide adequate compensation to their faculty and staff, to maintain their campuses, and to keep their libraries, laboratories, and other facilities up to date.

When inflation finally abated and American higher education began the awesome task of "catch-up," there must have been at least some university presidents in the independent sector who expected a round of applause. Without much direct funding from state treasuries, they had weathered a type of crisis for which there were almost no precedents or established rules. Even the wealthiest schools had to re-examine every line in their budgets. Even the best endowed became more careful in awarding tenure and more willing to forego new programs while shutting down those that had "outlived" their usefulness. Every university president in the nation had learned to speak, in an informed and sometimes expert manner, to his or her vice president for financial affairs.

Instead of applause, however, presidents found themselves dodging brickbats. Beginning about 1980, higher education institutions came under attack from a number of sources—private and governmental. A predominant issue was the question of whether American colleges and universities were continuing to operate in the public interest. People were confused and bitter about tuition increases and the seeming high cost of higher education in general. How well educational institutions were performing and how effectively they provided value for the tuition dollar spent were issues hotly debated—in Washington, D.C., and nationwide.

Amid this chorus of recrimination, focused on the subject of undergraduate education, contrary voices were hard to find. University presidents were stunned by a spectacular verbal assault which seemed to come often from sources housed not too physically distant from the campus of our very own university.

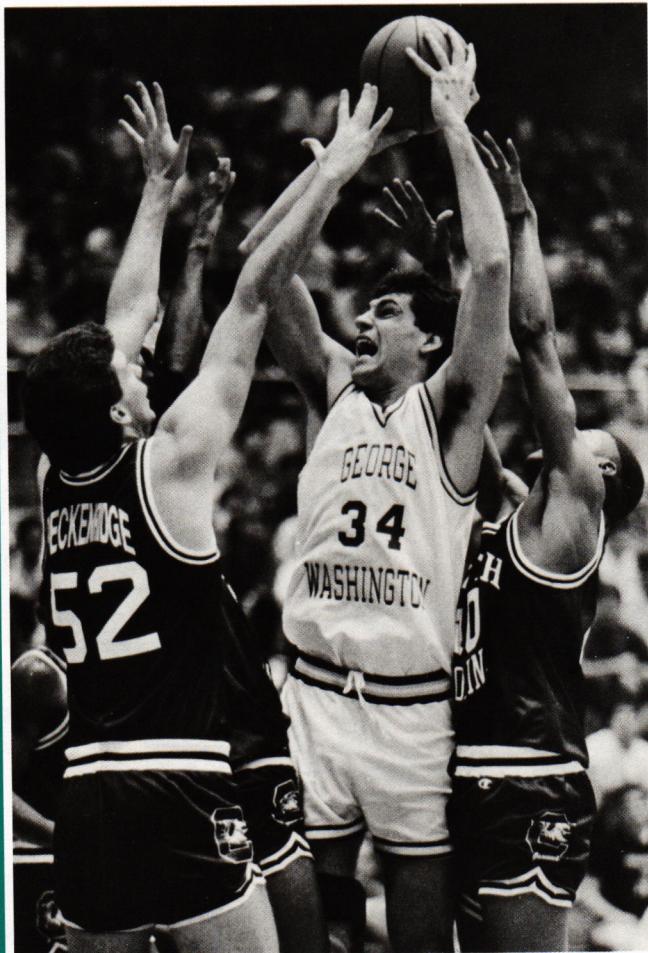

Much of the controversy centered on the price of undergraduate education. On that topic, one supportive voice emerged: that of former U.S. Commissioner of Education Harold Howe, II. In his 1987 essay, "The Low Cost of College," Howe observed:

Consider the arithmetic of the cost to a college of providing a year of education to a student. On the average, an academic year at a residential college requires about $12,000 to pay for all the services the college provides. At some colleges the cost is higher and at some lower. This cost is paid in various ways depending on whether the college is private or public and depending also on the family circumstances of students. The average student and his family actually pay less than half of the cost of college attendance.

Howe went on to note the full range of services provided by American higher education to its undergraduates, including a room with a semi-private bath, all heating and electric bills, three meals a day, entertainment of all kinds (including cultural events, social events, and sports events), facilities for socializing with other students, recreational facilities

The Charles E. Smith Center for Physical Education and Athletics is a multipurpose facility which, through its daily programs of recreation, intramurals, instruction, practice, and intercollegiate competition, serves some 3,000 people each day. (including opportunities for swimming, tennis and other healthful activities), extracurricular activities of all kinds, and health departments offering care "for both physical and psychological ills."

To this Howe was able to add assistance in finding jobs—summer jobs, part-time work during the academic year, and full-time employment following graduation; plus remedial education wherever necessary, vocational counseling, study abroad, access to special learning facilities and experiences (including libraries, laboratories, field trips, museums and guest lectures), and "the services of a small army of food service workers, maintenance personnel, clerical employees, and other non-academic denizens of academia, who keep the college organized and clean for the benefit of students."

Not the least of the services provided by American higher education, Howe declared, was "the personal attention of a low-paid but talented group of people known as the faculty, with a wide spectrum of skills and knowledge, whose main job is to help the student to learn what they know."

The point is reinforced if one contrasts our situation with higher education in other countries, including the major industrial powers. In England, France, West Germany, Italy, and Japan, universities in America are envied as places that provide their students with exceptional opportunities for study and for the exploration of a future career. In some of those countries, only a small percentage of students are able to gain access to higher education. Among the challenges they are likely to encounter in their quest for knowledge are overcrowded lecture halls, overcrowded libraries, and difficulties in obtaining the books they need.

Howe's cogent statement marked a turning point in the restoration of self-confidence among America's university presidents and senior administrators. And it coincided with a moment when the American public was "voting with its feet" by sending unprecedented numbers of high school graduates to college and confounding the long-feared admissions decline of the late 1980s and early 1990s.

Today, the main challenge facing higher education has been defined once again as access, especially for minority groups. Within that context in particular I offer here a few thoughts of my own on the subject of higher education in the United States. These thoughts build in obvious ways on the work of such legendary students of the purposes and problems of universities as Cardinal John Newman, Abraham Flexner, David Riesman, and Clark Kerr. At the same time, these observations reflect the personal experiences of a university administrator who has become increasingly involved in the services that today's university is offering, and can offer, to a nation confronted by the challenges of a bitterly competitive international marketplace.

I believe that we live today in a higher education society: a new type of social environment whose functioning, purposes, and long-term visions are deeply intertwined with a pervasive network of universities, four-year colleges, two-year colleges, and proprietorial institutes. The collective mission of this network is a simple one: to serve the needs of the United States and its citizens in every way feasible, including ways that extend well beyond the historical mission of educating a small percentage of high school graduates and an even tinier percentage of future professionals and government officials.

The extent to which this is true has been demonstrated, most recently, by the role that our community colleges have assumed in the training programs they conduct for or with local industries. At the other end of the spectrum, our universities are pursuing, with comparable enthusiasm, their relations with Fortune 500 corporations, medium-sized businesses, and government agencies, seeking to identify areas of mutual interest in both teaching and research. All across the spectrum, the walls between what used to be called the "ivory tower" and what used to be called the "outside world" are coming down—to such an extent that those committed to worrying are now concerned that academic independence may suffer as academies actively interact with American business and American society.

In this country, universities long ago established English as a Second Language (ESL) programs to deal with the growing heterogeneity of our population and our work force, as well as the growing number of international students arriving on our shores in quest of business, engineering, and other vocations. Our activities have moved on to become centers for dealing with the challenges of a multicultural, pluralistic society that must compete, in the arena of the global economy, with nations whose seeming advantages include relatively homogeneous populations as well as centralized economic coordination.

Universities are seen as highly adaptive resources whose faculties and administrative staffs ceaselessly scan the environment in search of initiatives that need to be provided now or in the near future. In the higher education society, individuals and companies are continually, rather than sporadically, involved with universities in their region and universities in other parts of the country.

I do not have to emphasize the contrast this type of functioning offers to the traditional “Idea of a University,” as outlined, for example, by Cardinal Newman in nineteenth-century England. The fact that we have adopted the caps and gowns and other paraphernalia reminiscent of the Middle Ages has tended to obscure the degree to which American universities are sui generis—deeply interwoven with our society’s well-being and progress.

A Record of Accomplishment

The achievements of America’s independent universities in the twentieth century are daunting to list, much less to discuss. Through their adaptive mode of functioning, they began by creating postgraduate degree programs on the German model, and by reforming their programs in medicine and law. They moved on, in the period after World War I, to institute humanities and “Great Books” curricula aimed at the needs of American high school graduates. They saw to it that this country entered the top ranks of international research in medicine and the sciences. In the decades following the Second World War, they have labored to improve the access of America’s minorities, women, and the handicapped to higher education.

America’s independent universities succeeded in weathering the political and social storms of the post-World War I period, the Depression, and the Cold War. Their record in this respect is not free from blemishes, but to the extent that they did make it possible for the ideals of academic freedom to survive the harassment of unorthodox intellectuals by Woodrow Wilson’s Attorney General and the anti-democratic erosion of academic freedom in the 1930s and the McCarthy Period, they demonstrated that “independent” meant more than merely “private.”

Finally, America’s independent universities pioneered the concept of an organization that engages in a continuous review of its own purposes and functioning. This last accomplishment probably needs some emphasizing right now, in response to some of the negative pictures painted in the earlier 1980s.

Today, non-stop self-scrutiny is common in the corporate world. But the moment at the turn of the century when America's universities began their self-critique marked the time at which this kind of programmatic evaluation became the academic norm. In this country at least, historians will eventually get around to telling us how many of America's reform efforts since 1900 were inspired by the undergraduate experience of the chief reformers themselves —how much they were inspired, in other words, by spending four critical years in a setting that has a world class genius for making itself uncomfortable. What we can say with confidence, even in 1988, is that the training in analytic capacities that is the academic common denominator has always had its reflexive as well as its externally directed side.

The allegation most easily leveled at America's independent universities in the twentieth century is that they have typically taken on more responsibility than they could handle. When they created their earliest humanities and "Contemporary Civilization" programs, they ran the risk of the American charge that the humanities were irrelevant to success in a "can-do" culture, and the European charge that literature read in translation wasn't literature. When they began to struggle with the issues of access, especially for minorities, they ran, and continue to run, the risk of being cited for what they failed to achieve. As their functioning has become ever more "practical" and more strongly linked with the needs of our society and our economy, they have accepted the risk of seeming to be miracle workers capable not just of tackling but actually of solving the dilemmas that face the United States as a mature industrialized society.

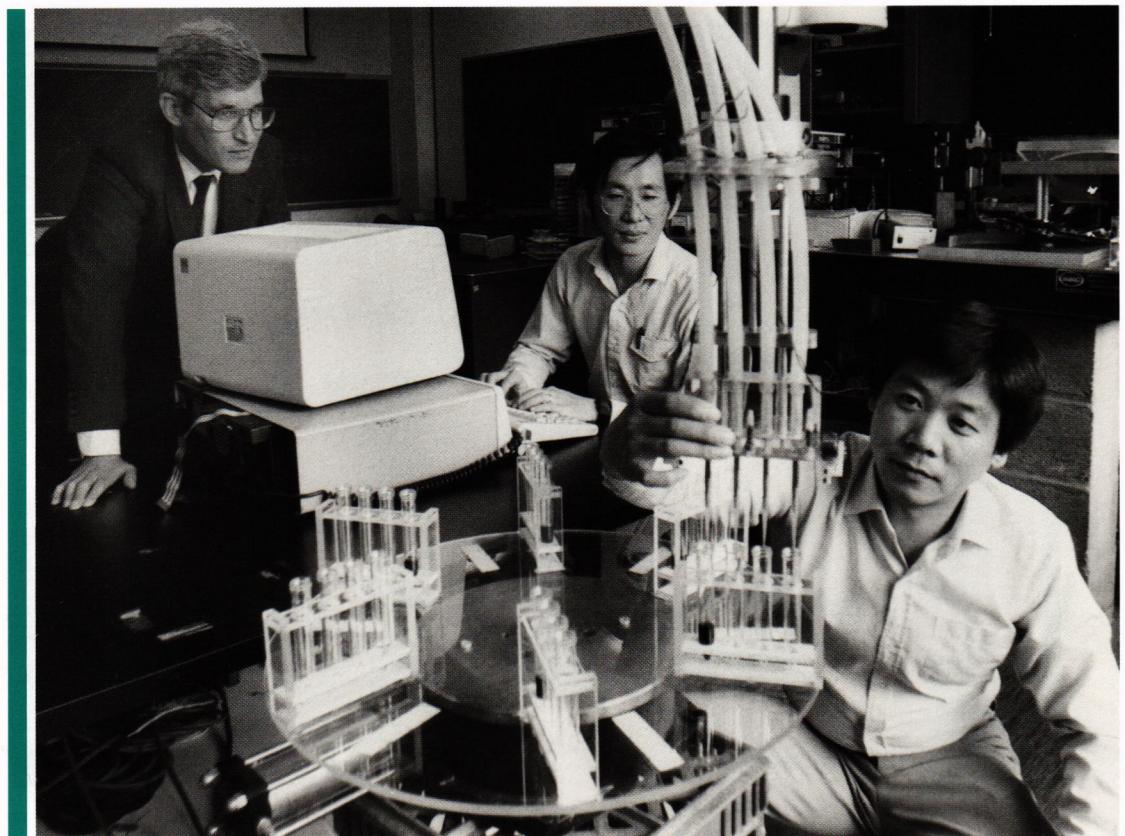

That is always a danger for the ambitious. America's independent universities have reflected the essence of the American character insofar as they too have been motivated by the notion that every problem has an answer if one works hard enough.

The reality is that our universities are qualitatively different from their European ancestors. In the twentieth century they have pioneered, in fact, a new style of education directed at larger numbers of students needing preparation for a novel kind of world, one that moves at the speed of electronic impulses in order to accomplish productive and/or destructive tasks of unprecedented magnitude. At a time when Winston Churchill's own Harrow School is beginning to emphasize computer technology and engineering, America's universities have become pioneers and leaders whom the other nations of our high-stress planet eagerly or reluctantly follow.

Role of The George Washington University

Having allowed myself to range over much of the history of higher education, I would like to focus now on a role of our very own university in this drama of continuing relevance, continuing assessment and reform, and growing commitment to serve the needs of our country within our internationalized, interdependent, and at the same time difficult and competitive world.

Before I do, however, one observation is in order: it may take me a good year or more to learn some of what I should know in order to serve as an effective long-term representative for a university of such historical significance, such wide-ranging programs and curricula, and such a unique location at the very heart of our nation's capital. Even two or three years hence, I will be an enthusiastic learner as well as an informed guide. My guiding motto in making the transition to my new position is: Listen carefully all the time; speak only when something needs to be said.

GW's Museum Education Program—the first professional course of study of its kind in the United States—includes a semester-long internship in a museum; Above, student Joanne Hirsch is shown at the site of her internship, the National Zoological Park. Program graduates currently fill important positions in institutions all around the world.

Only a handful of U.S. research centers specialize in the statistical coordination of large-scale medical investigations. The Biostatistics Center of GW's Dept. of Statistics/Computer and Information Systems is one of the largest; it works with scientists at the National Institutes of Health and at other colleges and universities. Currently the center is participating in several nationwide studies. Above, the center director, Prof. John M. Lachin, looks over results with (from left) Prof. Sarah Schlesselman, visiting Thai scholar Somrat Chanrit, Lachin, and graduate student/research assistant Lynda Green.

Begin almost 20 years ago, the National Law Center's Community Legal Clinics give law students invaluable experience in actually handling cases (above, student Andrew Lankler, right, meets with clients) while providing legal assistance to needy Washingtonians. CLCs comprise several individual clinics and enjoy a national reputation for excellence.

With that perspective firmly in place, I would like to state, in a single sentence, my personal conviction with regard to the center of learning and scholarship that has honored me with its presidency and an appointment to its faculty: The George Washington University is already a role model for other American universities—and that perception will be extended in the years before us.

In seeing this point clearly, it is important to keep in mind the two-tier structure that characterizes the common perception of American higher education. To many Americans, independent higher education is centered on the Ivy League schools, colleges perceived as close kin to the Ivy League, and a handful of independent or state-supported universities that have succeeded in identifying themselves as "almost Ivy League" and sometimes "better than Ivy League."

Those who work in higher education or know something about it are aware of how limited this perspective has been for several decades. At a time when the American economy is entering a period of actual panic with regard to trained management and production personnel, the roster of universities known to the American public—those whose names "spring automatically to the lips"—is open for new members. The future is available as never before to articulate institutions of higher education prepared to address the needs of our country as we approach the beginning of the third millennium, without regard for past glories. In other words, tomorrow belongs to universities that are already coping, in their own ways, with America's most pressing issues and are therefore hospitable to innovative ideas for continuing to do that and to methods of "doing it even better."

The Medical Center's Lipid Research Clinic is one of the original 11 lipid research clinics in the United States that conducted the landmark 10-year study proving that lowered blood cholesterol reduces heart attack risk. Today the clinic remains a leader in research/education efforts in that field. Above, lab technician Ann Smith-Roth, with second-year medical student Bob McDonald.

One especially visible GW alumnus is Lt. Gen. Colin L. Powell, MBA '71, who in 1987 became President Reagan's national security adviser. As head of the National Security Council, Powell runs the agency, provides advice, and funnels ideas from the secretaries of state and defense to the president. Powell, shown above last November with then-Dean of SGBA Norma Maine Loeser, was on campus to receive the SGBA alumni association's first annual "Statesman Award"—the day before he was named NSC boss!

Here what's "obvious" about The George Washington University is also what's most important. It is located only four blocks from the White House and within walking distance of the Capitol. Its graduates play a significant role in staffing the federal government of the United States as well as the governments of other nations. They are also at work, nationwide, in fields that range from business, law, and engineering to the social sciences, the arts, and the humanities. Its medical facilities serve the needs of the executive and legislative branches as well as the needs of Washington's suburban and inner-city populations. Its campus is a natural stopping-off place for diplomats and statesmen from every continent of our planet. Its

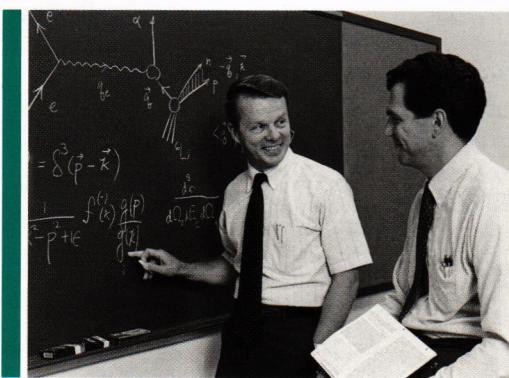

John M. Logsdon, director of GW's Space Policy Institute, has for almost two decades been one of the country's leading analysts and historians of the U.S. space program. He is a member of numerous advisory committees and is frequently consulted by the media on space issues. perspective is simultaneously local, regional, national, and international.

In short, The George Washington University is not only a member in good standing in the group of universities that today do the most significant higher-education work of our country, but it is also almost an epitome of what these universities are trying to achieve. It is a school that has already taken off. My role as president is to assist, rather than initiate, that process. My charge is to facilitate the scholarly endeavor of faculty, staff, and students.

The years ahead will be full of challenges and surprises. No “game plan” can be more than provisional. What is quite certain, however, is that The George Washington University and its community of scholars and learners matter a great deal where our troubled but exhilarating world is concerned and will mean even more as we draw steadily closer to a new century and a new millennium.

A RECORD OF SUSTAINED GROWTH

Philanthropic support for George Washington continued to increase in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1988. Total voluntary support reached $16,320,190, compared with $15,250,565 the previous year. This represents gifts and private grants actually received during the year but does not include pledges or other commitments payable in future years.

The Campaign for George Washington has now achieved a total of $54,484,726, representing 73 percent of its $75-million goal. This includes gifts, pledges, and other commitments credited to the Campaign since its official beginning on July 1, 1985. The Campaign will continue to June 30, 1990, and is "comprehensive," meaning that all gifts to the University—including those to any of its schools and to the Annual Fund—receive credit toward the Campaign goal.

Particularly encouraging was the continued growth in the Annual Fund during 1987–88, with total gifts of $5,236,930, including $1,472,728 given by 17,346 alumni. Increased annual giving in the midst of an ambitious campaign for capital support is a testament to the commitment of the University's alumni and friends.

The sustained growth in support of George Washington is a tribute to the efforts of its dedicated volunteers. Over 600 individuals actively participated in the University's fund-raising last year. In particular, the able leadership of Campaign General Chairman Oliver T. Carr, Jr., National Annual Fund Chairman George Olsen, and Luther Rice Society Chairman Thaddeus A. Lindner enabled the University to continue its progress in 1987–88.

The University looks toward the future with confidence that the goal of the Campaign for George Washington will be achieved and that the academic purposes it supports will be advanced.

Financial Reports

UNIVERSITY

Washington, D.C. 20052 / Office of Vice President and Treasurer

September 19, 1988

Report of the Vice President and Treasurer

Despite a shaky U.S. stock market and its collapse last October, the market value of the University's assets continued to improve during 1987/1988 and surged to its largest increase ever. Real property increased in assessed value to $686.2 million from $544.1 million in the previous year as a result of construction, acquisitions, and appreciation. The University's endowment, which consists of a portfolio that includes 47 percent commercial real estate and 53 percent securities, rose in market value to $251.5 million from $217.4 million.

Perhaps most importantly, the securities component of the University's endowment portfolio increased 18.1 percent, from $111.9 million to $132.2 million. $12.2 million of this gain was due to market appreciation while $8.1 million was attributable to gifts, bequests and other additions. Adding the $6.4 million of income to the market appreciation, the total return on investment was 16.6 percent during a twelve-month period when the Dow Jones Industrials Average dropped 8.5 percent and the Standard & Poor's 500 declined 6.9 percent.

To cope with securities volatility, The George Washington University utilizes the Common Fund's "Strategic Asset Allocation" service, which increases or decreases the equity ratio based not on market timing or forecasts but on comparisons of stock, bond and cash valuations compared to their historical values. During 1987, as the stock market rose steadily, the Common Fund reduced equity exposure until the University's portfolio was totally out of stocks on September 1, virtually the high point of the market rise. The October stock market crash could have reduced the University's endowment by several million dollars; instead the Strategic Asset Allocation process actually caused our endowment, then allocated to bonds which rose sharply in value, to appreciate during this tumultuous period. Because this process was accomplished through "hedging" and thus maintained outside our basic holdings allocation between stocks and fixed income investments, we did not incur the transaction costs and risk normally associated with precipitous changes in equity/fixed income ownership.

We are pleased with the results achieved and we commend our investment advisors. There are no magic formulas for market success and for an unusual period like 1987/1988 we owe as much to good fortune as we do to brilliant strategy. Nonetheless, the strong and steady ten-year growth shown on Page XXI gives us an important financial base upon which the University's future can depend.

Because of the continued high yield on our endowment investments, the University did not divert $2 million from the Quasi-Endowment Funds in order to finance an anticipated deficit and cash shortage in the Current Funds. It was determined that borrowing to finance the cash needs would be less costly than the foregone earnings. As a result the University realized a decrease of $1.4 million in Current Funds. Revenue from student fees increased 7.4 percent to $123.8 million (excluding medical school) and enrollment applications remained very strong.

In real estate matters, the National Academy of Sciences Lease of 2100 Pennsylvania Avenue ended on August 14, 1987, after 20 years. The building has since been completely remodeled and 82% leased as of June 30, 1988.

In the Medical Center, patient care revenue increased by $14.8 million compared to an increase of only $2.3 million in the previous year. Stimulated by the new Ambulatory Care Center and the recently negotiated Group Health Association contract, the Current Fund decline of $6.4 million during 1987/1988 should improve.

Total recorded assets of the University increased $41.7 million to $696.2 million and net assets increased $20.1 million to $443.3 million. Net book value of Plant Funds increased $18.6 million to $228.4 million and net book value of Endowment Funds rose $8.1 million to $149.8 million.

Notes to the Financial Statements

For the years ended June 30, 1988 and 1987

Accounting Policies The financial statements of the University are prepared on an accrual basis of accounting in accordance with the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants' audit guide for colleges and universities. The University's accounting policies with respect to certain items, for which alternate standards are recognized, are enumerated below.

Restricted gifts are reported as current income in the period received rather than in the period used.

The University accounts for its investment in its wholly-owned subsidiary, The George Washington University Health Plan, and certain other commercial enterprises on the equity basis of accounting.

Endowment income, excluding gains and losses on sales of investments, is reported and distributed as earned. Gains and losses on the sales of investments are accumulated with the Endowment Funds' principal balances.

The University does not record depreciation of physical properties except for Hospital buildings and equipment. Hospital depreciation charges are not included in current expenses but are recorded in the Plant Funds as a reduction of asset values and Net Investment in Plant.

Interest incurred during construction is capitalized as part of the cost of capital projects.

Note 1—Valuation of Investments Investments are stated at cost or, in the case of donated investments, at fair market value at date of acquisition.

Note 2—Temporary Advances These advances represent the temporary use of Current Funds pending the receipt of monies from other anticipated funding sources including grant and loan agreements and the receipt of pledged gifts from various donors.

Note 3—Group Contract Settlements Hospital charges paid under patient care group contracts are subject to audit and retroactive settlements by third party payors. Estimates for the 1988 and 1987 settlements under these agreements have been provided.

Note 4—Self-Insurance Trust and Restatement of Financial Statements The University has established an independently held self-insurance trust for professional liability claims which is funded annually based upon an actuarial determination. In addition, the University maintains umbrella coverage for amounts in excess of the basic self-insurance program.

In prior years, the University followed a policy of expensing for financial statement purposes an amount equal to its actuarially determined contribution to the self-insurance trust. Beginning in 1988, the University changed its policy in accordance with newly enacted accounting standards requiring that health care providers accrue the estimated cost of asserted and unasserted malpractice claims in the period in which health care services are rendered. This change, which has been effected retroactively, resulted in an increase in the unrestricted Medical Center Current Funds balance at June 30, 1986 of $1,214,742, an increase in 1987 unrestricted Medical Center Current expenses of $64,060 and an increase in unrestricted Medical Center Current Funds balance at June 30, 1987 of $1,150,682 as compared with amounts previously reported.

Note 5—Endowment and Similar Funds Assets of Endowment Funds, excluding Funds Held in Trust by Others, had book values at June 30, 1988 and 1987 of $159,339,800 and $151,638,566 and market values of $251,501,956 and $217,392,243 respectively. These funds include 55 funds which are separately invested and 437 funds which are invested on a pooled basis. A summary of book and market values, as of June 30, 1988 and 1987, together with unit value information and earnings per unit in the Consolidated Endowment Funds is presented below:

Total Bonds and Notes . . . . .	$195,053,097	$172,775,893

Trust Indentures of the above Building Bond issues require the University to deposit and maintain specified amounts in trustee controlled accounts. In satisfaction of these requirements, $17,745,646 and $17,721,383 were included in Deposits with the Trustees at June 30, 1988 and 1987, respectively.

Interest on indebtedness for the years ended June 30, 1988 and 1987 was either capitalized during construction or expensed. The amounts capitalized have been offset by interest earned on temporary investment of indebtedness proceeds when such proceeds are restricted for use in future construction.

In 1988, the University began recording the initial proceeds from borrowings in Unexpended Plant Funds rather than in Net Investment in Plant. For comparative purposes, amounts previously reported have been reclassified resulting in decreases in Unexpended Plant Funds balances of $60,188,934 and $78,715,498 at June 30, 1987 and 1986, respectively, with corresponding increases in Net Investment in Plant.

Note 9—Current Funds—Restricted Activity Restricted revenues amounted to $35,824,391 and $31,127,061 and restricted expenditures amounted to $34,848,933 and $29,496,081 for the years ended June 30, 1988 and 1987, respectively.

Note 10—Pension Plans Full-time faculty and staff are eligible for participation in the University's retirement annuity program. The program is administered by independent fiduciaries to whom all funds are transferred for investment purposes and annuity payments. Individual contracts issued under the plan provide for full and immediate vesting of both the University's and the participants' contributions. A participant's contributions are matched 200 percent by the University up to ten percent of the participant's annual salary. In addition, certain retirees whose employment pre-dated establishment of the retirement annuity program receive supplemental past service benefits which are funded on a current basis. University contributions including direct payments to retirees amounted to $9,374,389 in 1988 and $8,348,642 in 1987.

Note 11—The George Washington University Health Plan On March 2, 1987 the University acquired the 80% ownership interest in The George Washington University Health Plan not previously held by the University for approximately $7,500,000.

Note 12—Contingencies The University is a defendant in certain pending civil suits. In the opinion of the University, the University has a good defense to the claims not covered by insurance.

Report of Independent Accountants

To the President and Board of Trustees
The George Washington University
Washington, D.C.

September 19, 1988

In our opinion, the accompanying balance sheet and the related statement of changes in fund balances (Exhibits A and B) present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of The George Washington University at June 30, 1988 and 1987, and the changes in its fund balances for the years then ended in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles. These financial statements are the responsibility of the University's management; our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits. We conducted our audits of these statements in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards which require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements, assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, and evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for the opinion expressed above.

As discussed in Note 4 to the financial statements, the University's financial statements have been restated from those previously issued as a result of implementation of newly enacted accounting standards requiring that health care providers accrue the estimated cost of malpractice claims in the period health care services are rendered.
